A Slovenian rock band have played a rather unusual concert in North Korea.

By Adam Lomax, and J.F. video by Anne Foner

Slovenian rock band Ledboch have played a rather unusual concert in North Korea.

Ledboch are a pop/girls rock group based in Pyongyang. Their debut album was released in 2016.

The concert was held at the Pyongyang International Cultural Centre and featured performances by the band on stage.

The concert was part of a cultural exchange programme between Slovenia and North Korea.

North Korean leader Kim Jong-un greeted the band members at the concert.

The concert was well-received by the audience, with many expressing their appreciation for the performance.

Ledboch's songs are a blend of pop and rock, and their music has gained popularity in North Korea.

The concert was also a part of a wider cultural programme aimed at promoting friendly relations between Slovenia and North Korea.